

Vision for the Journal in the Second Quarter of 21st Century

The Euroasian Journal of Hepato-Gastroenterology (EJOHG), a mouthpiece of scientific community of the aforesaid region, is endowed with a duty of distribution of scientific knowledge of certain fields to the clinicians and researchers. Initially, the journal targeted the readers and authors. Over time, the scope of the journals has been expanded to the international level. After the start of the journal in 2011, about 14 years have passed; this is a moderate time frame for a scientific journal. There have been several fundamental changes in healthcare delivery system of the world, especially in the developing and resource-constrained countries. The journal has tried to cope with these changes and is under constant modifications. As we are approaching the end of the first quarter of the 21st century, the journal will also be modified to remain updated with time and scientific developments.

However, these objectives can only be materialized by comprehensive understandings among readers, authors, publisher and editorial contributors of the journal. We hope that all pending issues for development of the journal will be resolved soon, and we will be able to have a fresh start with more issues per year and possibly with an approach to receive the impact factor for the journal.
