

The world has experienced major transformation in the recent years, specially in the last decade with the region bridging the two major continents, namely Asia and Europe coming up rapidly. Not only the Central and South Asian and East European countries are becoming more important economically and politically, they are also contributing increasingly in the arenas of science and culture. These regions, in not much distant history have contributed immensely for the advancement of mankind in all aspects of life which is evident from the rich history of these regions. And now in the changed global order, they are reassuming their glorious role as they had played in the past. This has created a need for more platforms to carry to the world scientific achievements of researchers from these thriving regions. No wonder a peer reviewed journal on gastrointestinal, hepatobiliary and pancreatic diseases was long felt. Euroasian Journal of Hepato-Gastroenterology was published under the auspicious of Euroasian Gastroenterological Association to meet this demand.

Since its inception Euroasian Journal of Hepato-Gastroenterology has played a major role in publishing quality scientific research in gastroenterology and hepatology from the region and beyond and over time has become the leading journal in these fields in the region, especially after it's indexing in the PubMed couple of years back. Gastroenterologists and hepatologists from the member nations of Euroasian Gastroenterological Association now keep Euroasian Journal of Hepato-Gastroenterology at the top of their list while considering publishing the finest of their researches. The journal is also facilitating research by the young stars of the region by publishing abstracts presented at the annual conferences of Euroasian Gastroenterological Association.

Euroasian Journal of Hepato-Gastroenterology is blessed to receive attention and priority from the emerging as well as the leading gastroenterologists and hepatologists from the Euro-Asian region. Editorial Board of the journal is fully aware of the responsibility. This brings to them and is committed to discharge this duty with utmost sincerity. The journal aims to partner the region in its growth and remain the leading platform for dissemination of scientific knowledge in gastroenterology and hepatology generated from the Euroasian region in the fields of gastroenterology and hepatology and looks forward toward further growth in the days to come.
